Bridge Life-Cycle Cost Assessment

The preliminary bridge feasibility analysis explored two options: reconstructing the Hoan Bridge in its current configuration; and an at-grade roadway option with a new lower profile bridge such as a lift bridge. The at-grade option has higher up-front costs, but potentially lower long-term costs in comparison to the option that reconstructs the bridge in its current configuration.

After construction is complete, it is expected that the at-grade option will have $1 million in annual maintenance costs due to the lift bridge maintenance. However, this option eliminates the need for a full reconstruction of the Lake Interchange which costs $135 million as part of the current configuration option. When the two options are compared, the at-grade option will have a savings of $80 million in the year 2025.

The current configuration option is expected to have very little maintenance costs after the 2025 reconstruction of the Lake Interchange. Due to the maintenance costs of the lift bridge, the differences in the life cycle costs will narrow over the long term. The at-grade option will need full rehabilitation in 2042 at a cost of $23 million, bringing the cost of the two options even closer.

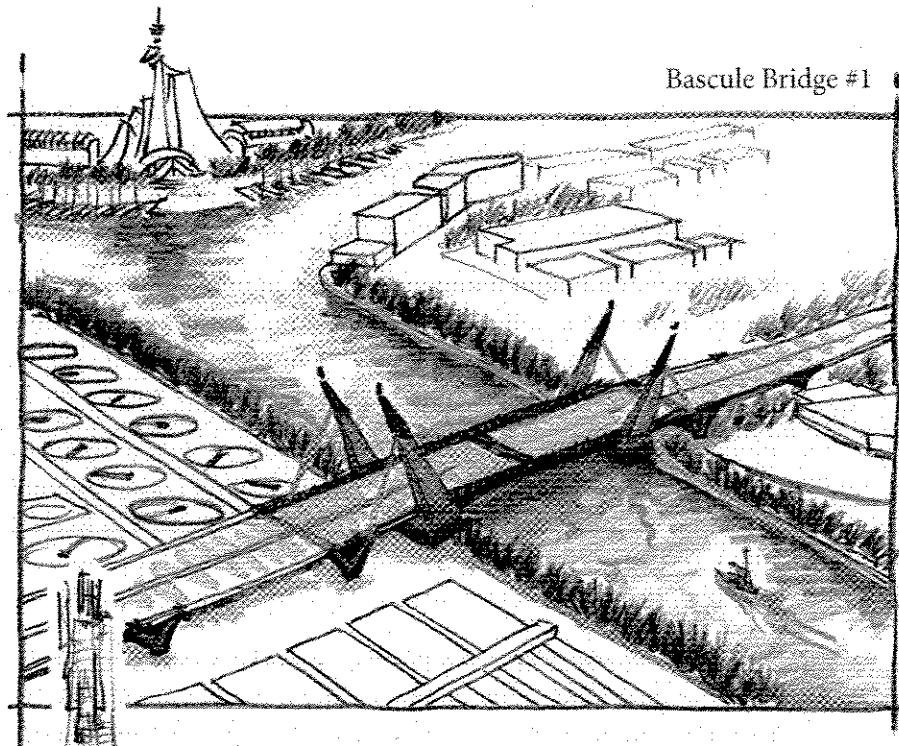

At the termination of the life-cycle cost analysis in 2053, the current configuration option replacement costs are estimated at $425 million, but there is remaining value for each option after 2053. The at-grade option has 37 years remaining in its design life at 2053. The new Hoan Bridge replacement in 2053 will have 74 years remaining, which is represented by the dip in costs at the end of the graph.

*The at-grade option does not account for hazardous materials, real estate acquisitions, compensable utility relocations, or the potential for poor soil conditions. The costs associated with these variables are unknown, and need further investigation before quantifying a dollar amount.
